1983's events, as seen through the front page

The April 14 issue indicated that the Town of Appomattox had refused to alter its ordinance regulating video games, with video still prohibited in public places from 11 p.m. Saturday to 7 a.m. Monday.

Appomattox Countians were shocked to learn in the April 21 Times-Virginian that a county native, Staff Sgt. Ben H. Maxwell, had been killed in a terrorist attack on the U.S. Embassy in Beirut, Lebanon.

In the final issue of the paper that month, readers learned that Watkins M. Abbitt, Jr., had been appointed by Gov. Charles S. Robb to a state committee which would study the effects of proposed uranium mining and milling in the south-central portion of the state.

The first paper in May brought news that Appomattox County would participate in a statewide "Whistle Stop Relay" slated for June. In the May 12 issue, readers learned that Martin Webb had been appointed by the Appomattox Town Council to fill the unexpired portion of Walter H. (Buddy) Carson's term on Town Council, and that Appomattox County Sheriff Gene Richardson would run for re-election. The following week's paper carried news that Barbara R. Williams had filed to run for re-election to the county clerk's office.

The May 26 issue noted that Virginia M. Babcock had received the state's Meritorius Service Award for substantial contributions to human services in Virginia, and that R.B. Moore had been named president of the Woodmen of the World's Life Insurance Society for Virginia.

In the June 2 paper, readers learned that three persons -- Nelson Mann, Deborah Powell, and John Fedison -- would be considered for the vacant Southside District seat on the school board. In that paper also, it was announced that Monte Mayo had filed to run for re-election to the office of Commissioner of Revenue in Appomattox County.

One of the stranger stories of the year was published in the June 9 paper, following an unexpected visit to Appomattox's Triangle Plaza Shopping Center by a black bear. That paper also detailed the unveiling of a portrait of retired judge George Abbitt in the county courthouse.

The June 16 paper noted that Deborah Powell had been selected by the Board of Supervisors to serve on the county's school board, and that more than 100 people had participated in the Whistle Stop Relay.

The June 30 paper told of the Rev. Ron Gallagher's quest for a marathon preaching record. The following week, in the July 7 Times-Virginian, readers learned that Gallagher had indeed set a new world's record, preaching continuously for 122 hours.

Later that month, in the July 21 issue, readers learned that Maude Goff, a restaurateur legend in Appomattox County, had returned to the county to cook for the Appomattox Assembly's weekend barbecue sale fundraisers.

Youth baseball made headlines in August, when the Appomattox Dixie Youth League Pre-Major All Stars won the state championship and advanced to the World Series in Alabama, as recorded in the Aug. 4 Times-Virginian.

The following week's paper noted that Clyde Mayberry, an Appomattox County resident, would oppose Claude Anderson for the 59th District House of Delegates seat. The final issue of August brought some sad news: crop losses in Appomattox County caused by the heat and drought had already topped $1.5 million as of Aug. 25, and were still mounting.

The front page of the Sept. 1 issue of the paper carried a story about the opening of county schools, as well as a profile of Cindy Bollinger, who joined the staff of the Times-Virginian as classified ad manager and receptionist. That issue also showed Appomattox Sheriff Gene Richardson with marijuana plants that had been confiscated in the county by the Sheriff's Department and the state police. The plants had a street value of more than $75,000.

Sept. 14's paper noted that Dana McGrath had been named Miss Appomattox, and that the county was seeking disaster status due to crop damages during the summer.

The Sept. 21 paper noted that the Lions Club had staged a winner in the first Fall Beef Festival. That issue also noted that television news personality Jeff Taylor would be the head conductor for the 1983 Railroad Festival.

The final issue of the paper in September carried a story on Christine MacKenzie, who had been named the "Outstanding Citizen of the Year" by the Concord Ruritan Club. The paper also noted that plans were under way for opening a Schewel's store at Traingle Plaza in Appomattox.

A record crowd attended the 1983 Railroad Festival in Appomattox County, according to a story on the front page of the Oct. 12 Times-Virginian. The Oct. 19 paper noted that Armstrong Furniture's Appomattox plant had produced its millionth suit of furniture. That paper also carried a story noting that the Board of Supervisors were seeking changes in Route 26 to improve the safety of that highway.

The Oct. 26 issue of the paper notified readers that Lloyd Vaughan had been elected president of the Appomattox County Chamber of Commerce. The paper also carried a story noting that a county committee had decided that the potential risks of locating a low-level nuclear dump site in the county outweigh any potential benefits.

The Nov. 9 Times-Virginian carried a story about Pamplin's receiving an award for community development from the Virginia Municipal League. Pamplin is the smallest town to ever receive such an award, according to the story. That paper also featured a story on the dairy farm of Richard and Twyman Nash, which won a state soil and water conservation award.

David Nash, Claude Anderson and Ida Belle Campbell won the three local contested races in the November general election, according to the Nov. 16 Times-Virginian. The final paper of November carried a sad story of two men who died in a head-on automobile collision on Thanksgiving night on Route 26 in the county.

The final month of 1983 featured a story on the improving economic health of the county, as noted in a Dec. 7 Times-Virginian story. The Dec. 14 paper told of the state "Do it Yourself With Wool" contest, in which five local girls participated.

And, with winter fast approaching, the county's emergency services coordinator, Bill Britton, warned of ways to avoid tragedy in the face of harsh elements in a Dec. 21 story, which was published the very day that the first serious ice storm of the season hit Appomattox County.

A Special Message To Our Customers And Friends

It is appropriate this time of year to pause and "count our blessings" which during 1983 have been very great. God has blessed us with good health and the opportunity to do business in a fine community. We appreciate the trust and patience of all of you for whom we list and sell property. We thank our buyers as well as the prospects who looked at properties and who we hope will become buyers in 1984! For selling one or more of our listings we salute John Ackerman of Strout Realty, Pat Johnson Cowan of Century 21-Gail Boswell Associates, Inc., Pat Elder of Century 21-Evelyn Lowe Associates, Tommy O'Brien of United Farm Agency and many other agents who have showed our listings and otherwise cooperated with us to make 1983 a good year. In the area of financing, we appreciate the cooperation and advise of the managers and personnel of our local lending institutions, American Federal Savings & Loan, Central Fidelity Bank, Farmers National Bank, Federal Land Bank, and Ava Marshall and her staff at the Appomattox County Farmers Home Administration Office. To our attorneys and their secretaries, our Town and County officials who are always so cooperative, our contractors, suppliers, the Times-Virginian Staff and the various other local business people on whom we depend, our secretary and office manager, Peggy Romanac, our back-up secretary Angie Webber, our Sales Associates and all the wives and family members involved --we say THANKS! We are proud to be doing business in Appomattox! We appreciate the support by the people here of a local company and we, in turn, promise to continuously improve our service and performance to the mutual benefit of ourselves and our community and be second to none in Real Estate Sales and related services!

Thanks again, and Best Wishes for a happy and prosperous 1984!!!
